Cyber psychology is the study of the human mind and its behaviour in the context of human interaction and communication of both humans and machines, further expanding its bounds with the culture of computers and virtual reality that take place on the Internet. That includes behaviour on social media, Internet addiction, issues with online dating sites, cyber bullying and other aspects of how people conduct themselves online. The mainstream research studies seem to focus on the effect of the Internet and cyberspace on the psychology of individuals and groups. Cyber psychology also encompasses human interactions with other technologies, such as mobile computing, gaming, virtual reality and artificial intelligence. It studies personality development in the online medium, the relationships we develop on the internet.
